The ship, the sen, the cloudless sky: there was nothing else to see, nothing else to think of. Work, study, play even, were alike impossible in that tierce, scorching heat. If you touched a bit of iron on deck it almost burned your hand. If you lay down between decks covered with a sheet, you awoke in a bath of perspiration.

The man, in his excitament, repeated the shout before he could be hailed from the deck. "Where away?" sang out the Captain. "Two points on the weather how, sir." was the reply. That phrase about the "weather bow" was a nautical fletion, for there was no wind to speak of; and what there was was nearly dead astern. Keep her away two points," said Commander Neville; and the order was promptly oboyed. In a few second the news had spread through the ship; and the men clustered on the bulwarks, stranger. "She looks for all the world like a slaver, sir," remarked Mr. Brabazon, the First Lieut count, to the Commander. Neville said nothing but his lips were firmly compressed; and a gleam of excitement was in

"Fire a blank cartridge, Mr. O'Riley," said he to the Second Lieutenant: "and signal her to ask her nationality and her code number." This was done; and in answer to the signal the schooner slowly hoisted the American colours. "She has eased away her sheets, and luffed a point or two, sir," said the quarter-master. tonching his cap.

The Captain morely answered this by a nod. " Put a shot in your gue, Mr. O'Riley," said ie. " Lower your hoist and make a fresh hoist, demanding her name."

This was done, but the American took no "Fire a shot, Mr. O'Riley-wide, of course." said the Commander:

Again the deafening report of the big gau sounded in our ears; and we could see the splash young man lifted his head. of the shot as it struck the water about fifty yards from the schooner. Immediately a flag was run up, then another, and another; and we saw that she was not giving us her code number, but was spolling out hor name, letter by letter -The Black Swan.

"Just look that up in the United States Mershant Registry." said the Captain to the First Lieutenant. And in half a minute he had reported -" No such name, sir." This was something more than suspicious.

And the wind was rising "Hoist the signal for her to heave to!" oried Commander Neville. "Take a boat and a halfa dozen hands, Mr. O'Riley," he continued; "board her, inspect her papers and come back to report. If her papers are not in order," added he, "you may search for slaves; but if they are you had better do nothing further. You know it is clearly set_down in the Protocol that we are not entitled to search the hold if the papers are in order; and there have been complaints lately against some over zoalous officers who have ! got into trouble in consequence. So be careful. But keep your eyes open. Note any suspicious circumstances, and come back as soon as you can

Before Lieutenant O'Riley reached the ship saw that everything about her had been sacrificed to speed. Her spars, especially, were unusually heavy for a craft of her size. The British officer was received by a little thin, olderly man wearing a Panama hat, and speaking with a strong Yankee accent. "Produce your papers, if you please," said O'Rilloy. They were hunded out at once, and seemed to be perfectly regular.

"What have you got on board?" was the next question. "General cargo—dry goods, and so on." "Why isn't your name on the Register?"

"Ain't it now? Well. I guess it must be because this is a new ship. We can't put our name on the Register by telegraph, mister." "Just tell your men to knock off the hatches. I want to have a look at your cargo." The skipper shook his head.

"I've been delayed long enough," said he "and have lost a great part of the only wind we've had in this darned latitude for a week." "I'll do it myself, then!" cried O'Riley. "Not now, sir; not with six men, while have fifteen. You have no right to search the hold of a respectable merchantman and disturb her cargo. Do you take me for a slaver, or what? If you must have the hatches up, send back to your man-of-war for a larger crew, so as to overpower me, you understand, and you may do it with pleasure. But I guess there'll be a complaint lodged at Washington, and you folks in London will have to pay for it. That's all, mister. I only want things fair and square, within my treaty rights." And having delivered himself of this long speech, the Yankee skipper turned on his heel. Of course O'Riley could only return to the Petrel and report all this to his Commander. "I'm convinced she is a slaver, sir," said he in conclusion. "But you have no evidence of it; and you say the papers were all in order."

"Apparently they were, sir," "Then I'm afraid I can do nothing." said the Commander. And to the deep disgnst of the whole ship's crew, the order was given for of Excellent and High Finish. PERMANENT the Petrol to return to her course.

All that night, however, Commander Neville was haunted by doubt whether he had not Opa better have run the risk of accomplaint and a reprimand rather than to forego the overhauling of so suspicious looking a craft; and in the morning a rumour reached his ears that the coxswain, who had accompanied Mr. O'Riley to the Black Swan, had noticed something about her of a doubtful nature. The man was sent for and questioned, and he said that while the Licetenant was on board, the boat of which he was in charge had dropped a little way astern; and that he had then noticed that the name of the vessel had been recently painted out, but that the last two letters were distinctly visible. And the letters were LE, not AN.

"The scoundrel said she was a new ship! eried the Commander. "Bout ship!" "We can't possibly catch her up, sir," said the First Lieutenant, dryly. "I don't know that, Mr. Brabazon," answered HONGKONG AND WHAMPOA DOCK Noville. "There has been hardly any wind, and we know the course she was steering. She

Trust Companies in England formed for the purpose of such investments have been almost uniformly successful. Had such a JOMPANIA GENERAL DE TABACOS Company existed in Hougkong twenty years the average return on investment made then would now be about 175 per cent on the money originally laid out, and the increase in value of the Stocks purchased would average

New Companies are likely to be formed here from time to time for a variety of purposes, and there is no reason to suppose that investments made in their shares in the early stages of their history as dividend-paying Companies, may not, in the course of years, shew as handsome profits, and as vast increases in value as any known in the past. The Stooks and Shares of existing Companies afford also, on occasions, favourable opportunities for investment.

8.—It will form no portion of the business of this Company to float new Companies, underwrite shares, or invest or deal in anything but the Stocks, Shares and Debentures of the outerprises indicated in paragraph 1. ".- Profits, and considerable profits, may, it is believed, be made by the purchase and sale from day to day of local Stocks, Shares, and Debentures of the descriptions indicated. The value of Share property in Hongkong is very great, so great that even with the facilities afforded by the Banks, the purely speculative dealers are unable fairly to grapple with the situation and afford to the many holders adequate outlets. There are few or no permanent investors in the Colony, and there are therefore great and frequent fluctuations in values. The ever changing nature of the population is constantly throwing shares and stocks upon the market, quite apart from the operations of speculative dealers, and thus very valuable opportunities are constantly being offered to buyers with capital at command. The Company will, it is hoped, not merely secure reasonable profits for its shareholders, but will confer a benefit on the shareholding community generally by steadying the local markets and ensuring them against violent

FATAL PAST.

BAD NEWS. The next morning Francis Roche, who had stayed all night at his uncle's hotel, rushed up to the Colonel's bedroom, who was in the act of shaving himself, and was somewhat grimly regarding the colour of his moustrehe. "Uncle Walter! Uncle Walter!" called Francis from without, " may I come in ? I've got !

What ou earth is the matter, Frank?" he called out aloud 'What are you making such a row about P" "May I come in ?" said Francis, opening the door without further leave and entering the room newspaper in hand. "There is such a ter rible thing happened. Uncle Walter-it's in the paper here—Lord Ennismore was, shot yester, into his coat pecket and handed a letter to sigh, " Not dead ?" asked the Colonel hastily, turning round razor in hand. ' No, not dead, but he is badly wounded. Shot in the chest, and Sir William Thompson has started for Brackenford. The report is that he has been accidentally shot by peachers." "Not unlikely. It's a bad business. Confoundedly awkward, too, just now." "That's what I wanted so much to see you for Uncle Walter," said Francis Roohe earnestly. gravely.

It's impossible, atterly impossible, at such time to add to Lady Ennismore's anxieties. shall certainly be no party in doing so, and if have any influence on -my father," and Francis hesitated a moment; "or he has any good feeling left, he will surely never attempt it." "You are quite right, Frank. You had bee see this fellow and explain how for the present this affair must be kept absolutely quiet. Good

"Handsome women never get old, my boy But go and order breakfast; I'll be down in ten minutes; and leave the newspaper, I want to road the particulars about poor Ennismore." -So Francis left the newspaper containing the first account of Lord Ennismore's injuries, and went to order breakfast, and then stood by the fire full of thought. It would make a great change to every one concerned if anything happened to Lord Ennismore, he knew. It would · place Lady Eunismore in a different position also, and make hisown father's claims easier to hear. But that she should not be disturbed at present he was determined. "He,"-somehow Francis Robce could not yet reconcile himself even to think of George Roche as his father-"he must listen to what I've got to say, and—my poor mother, I should like to be of some help and comfort to her now-but I suppose that cannot be."

Then his thoughts went to Helen Drummond. and their strange and unexpected meeting of the night before. "She looks very sad sometimes, and yet what a dear face it is." he reflected. "I think she cares for me-yes. I am sure she was griad to see me, and I love her—ever, ever so well." His thoughts were interrupted by his uncle who entered the room erect, clean shaven, and stalwart looking as usual. They also strongrecommended that "European Assistants ... should be obtained from England as speedily as possible and that, in the meantime, temporary assistance should be locally obtained.

H. S. Palmer, who wrote the original report which subsequently led to the establishment of the Observatory, was appended to the Commissioners' report. The suggestions submitted by the Commission have not yet been carried out, but their report has been printed by order of the Governor. and they have thus in some sense had His Excellency's general approval. Whenever they are fully carried out, the working of this Observatory will be greatly improved and its immediate practical utility will be very much extended. I have to record my appreciation of the great skill and invariable courtesy with which the Chairman of the Commission conducted the enquiry. It is proper to call attention to this as it does not appear from the printed evidence attroped to the report. But the printed evidonce is quite incomplete and misleading. Many important remarks have been omifted by the r porter and my explanations are quite incorrectly put down or not entered at all. Had the circulation of the printed evidence not been limited it would have done much towards strongthening popular fallacies concerning typhoens. The Commission recommended the establishment of a branch Observatory at the Peak, and communication arranged with the Office of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company. General Palmer reported in 1881 that he considered an ansmograph on the top of the Peak to-be required. At prosent an advance upon the knowlodge of typhoons gained in the Observatory during the past seven years depends mainly and on the fop of the Penk We do not eyen know how for the present registers, kept by the signalman, are to be trusted e.g they show that the wind blows less strongly there during typhoons than it does at ses level. A new cable was laid across the harbour the spring of 1890, and the Observatory is now in direct connection with the Offices of the Telegraph Companies. That was of course the principal defect in connection with the immediate utility of the observations, and no improvement could take effect without it .. It is to be regretted that the cable was not laid in 1883. There is more or less of an impression upon the minds of some people that statements as to the merits and effects of popular medicines should be received with a degree of allowance. try, has reformed the Cabinet, the other states. That is to say, people are apt to think the proprietors of these articles often enlarge upon and exaggerate the real facts in order to create a demand for what they have to sell. We are inclined to believe this is seldom the case, as the intelligent persons who own these medicines are aware that any sort of over-statement tends to injure their sales rather than to increase them. The public are sure to form a correct judgment as to the value of an advertised article, and any false claims for it are certain to be recognised and denounced. Honesty is the best policy in this as in all other cases. Therefore the reader need not hesitate to accept as true any announcements of which the following is an example:-COPY. "I, Thirza Daniels, of Wrafton, nr. Barnstaple, do solemnly and sincerely declare as follows:---"I was always a strong, healthy woman up to the early part of 1879, when I began to be troubled with my liver and stomach. In July of that year I took a chill from sitting on some wet grass. and this brought on sciation and rhoumatism. I had dreadful pain in my hips and legs; it was like knives cutting through me. My appetite left me, and what little I did eat gave me great pain in the stomach and chest. I had a bad taste in the month and pains in the sides and between the shoulders. Finally I got so weak I had to bring home my eldest daughter from service to look after the house and my four children. For several months I went on in this way. At first I doctored myself, rabbing my joints with a rabbing bottle and poulticing. Then I sent for the doctor and he said my blood was poisoned. He blistered me and gave me medicine. I was under his care for five months, but I got weaker all the time and went thin as a skeleton. The pain whilst in bed was very severe, I could scarcely bear it: and I turned and turned, but could not find an easy pisco. Sometimes I was lifted to the floor, and lay there to see if any ease could be got: I became so bad I sent for a doctor from Braunton, but as I got no better, my husband got a recommendation from the late Colonel Harding, of Upoott, and I attended at the dispensary at Barnstable four months, and then went as an indoor patient in the Barnstaple infirmary, and was treated by two doctors. They agreed it was blood poisoning, and talked of performing an operation on my thigh, but combinded not to do it, saying I was too weak. They blistered me again, and no relief from this, they applied leeches, but as I fast as the leeches were put on they dropped off poisoned by my blood. I was so low-spirited in the hospital that I felt if I did not get home I should die soon, so they made arrangements to take me away. When I got in the open air my senses left me, and they thought I was dying. After reaching home I was in great agony, and sent my busband for our dector. He said he would come, but it was of no use, as he could do no more than he had done. I lay for weeks, and was so bad that when people spoke to me I had not the strength to reply. At this time my nephew. Robert Daniels, of Pontypridd, sent us word to try Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, as it had worked wonderful cures in the district where he lived. So-my husband went to Mr. Farley's, the grocer, High Street, Barnstaple, and bought a bottle. Before I had taken all of that bottle, I could eat, and my food seemed to do me good. By degrees I got stronger and stronger, and after taking 150 lbs. to the square inch; they are 16 feet long fourteen bottles I was strong and healthy. My flesh came on, and all pain left my thigh and 116-21 in Tubes, weight about 8 Tons each; legs, and I have never ailed anything to speak they have been built at H. M's Naval Yard,
